Oklahoma Retail Feed Cost Report (Monthly)11-14-25

Compared to last report: Feed prices were either down or unchanged. Producers are optimistic that this winter won't cost as much to feed cattle as last winter, with feed prices continuing to decrease and hay both being plentiful and cheap. Last Monday, the entire state experienced a hard freeze but currently summertime temperatures have returned and are forecasted until this time next week. Extreme drought has begun creeping back into parts of southwestern Oklahoma and almost no measureable rain has fallen anywhere in the state over the past two weeks. CME live and feeder cattle futures have been erratic to say the least these last two weeks. For reference, feeder cattle futures November contract, at the time the last feed report was published, closed at 371.70 and currently November contract is at 338.67.
